

Omar Dominguez

Director of Government Relations and Sector Development, Vantage Point

Omar has fourteen years of experience leading outstanding teams and pioneering initiatives in corporate, philanthropic, not-for-profit, and voluntary organizations. He has advised a broad range of international clients and stakeholders ranging from senior government officials, not-for-profits, business executives, investors, Indigenous groups, and some of the most active developers of affordable housing in this region. Omar brings a unique background leading the development of consulting services, research, and engagement initiatives across multiple economic sectors and geographic regions.

A strategic leader and an engaging communicator, Omar, is passionate about bringing disparate groups into productive collaboration. He also brings a unique lens on the relationship between civic engagement, sustainable finance, and community resilience. Omar serves as vice-chair of the Vancouver City Planning Commission, a volunteer citizen body with a mandate to advise the Mayor and Council about planning and development issues affecting the city.
